Is my house historic?

Currently, the City of Los Angeles has over 1100 sites designated as Historic Cultural Monuments—many of them are residential homes. How did those sites become Historic Cultural Monuments? Did something important happen there? Did someone important or famous live there? What makes a structure or location historic? Do you think you live in a home that could be considered for Historic Cultural Monument status? These questions and more will be answered during this fun and interesting program. You'll also learn how to do the research and what you can find on-line about your home.

Our speaker, published author, historian and preservation activist Charles J. Fisher has successfully steered well over 100 sites through this process to achieve monument status, and is an undisputed expert in his field. Charles will demystify the process while illuminating the various benefits derived by such designations.
