

Foothill Connections to Old Los Angeles

Way back, in the days when all the roads to Los Angeles led to a mere dusty pueblo, early connections to our foothill community were being forged. Long before there was a Foothill Boulevard or Honolulu Avenue, when miners and homesteaders roamed these hills, links developed that are little known today. Come join our valley's very own History Hunter, Craig W. Durst, on an exciting journey to explore these very connections. From the time Los Angeles was a "Hell Town" to its transformation to the "City of Angels" individuals found their way here and discovered the grandeur of this area. Travel back in time to meet these hardy folks and learn of the relationships they developed with our hills. From Judges to Wine-makers and Nuns to No Gooders, we'll follow their paths from one end of the Crescenta Valley to the Land of the Sun. The presentation culminates with visitors from other worlds making their claim on the foothills through the lens of a television camera. Come enjoy these special stories from our past.
